

Body cam shows cookie-eating squirrel charging police

WEDNESDAY, 03 JANUARY, 2018

Caught on camera: burglar squirrel attacks cop

Two officers from the Brockport Police Department in upstate NY responded to the home on Friday after dispatchers received a call that the squirrel was eating cookies in the kitchen, the police department wrote.

The squirrel then runs out of the room leaving the officers laughing hysterically.

Police entered the house to the sounds of blasting music from the radio, which the homeowner claimed the squirrel had turned on.

Suddenly, the squirrel drops down from the ceiling onto a table and launches itself at one of the officers.

The squirrel can be seen scurrying out the door before bolting back in, much to the amusement of the residents and responding officers.

Police outside Rochester, N.Y., couldn't help but laugh while they attempted to apprehend an alleged cookie-eating, trespassing squirrel from a woman's home.

Body cam footage of the incident was posted to the Brockport Police Department, clocking up more than 260,000 views since Saturday.

The officers finally captured the critter and released it unharmed.