

Transit Union Says Baltimore Subway Infested With Rats

June 3 2016, Baltimore, USA

Baltimore's Transit Union says the city's subway system is infested with rats and working conditions are unbearable.

According to the Baltimore Sun, Union President David McClure says workers find rats on the tracks, platforms, escalators and under floorboards in booths.

The union wants the MTA to adopt a program to get rid of the rats. The MTA says it routinely exterminates pests, and Metro stations are swept and mopped daily.

A spokeswoman says the union's "publicity stunt" is an attempt for its leadership to solidify votes before their elections next week.
